The undersigned begs to inform the highly respected community of this city and the country, that he has established an

INK MANUFACTORY.

No. 50, Calle 25 de Mayo.

And is prepared to sell as good Ink, as any made in any part of the globe, and warranted to retain its beautiful jet black color which it has at the moment when used, at 50 p. 0|0 less than the same can be bought at any other house.

People under the impression, that they pay their $20 more for a quart bottle of English ink, can have the same proved, that in at the ink sold for English, is made in this country, and imposed upon the public as such. But I am not ashamed to put my own Name on the labels, for as fair examples that my Ink is of a much superior quality, and to cases under current the most of the Inks.

I—It is a real rich black at the moment when used.

II.—Retains its color.

III.—Writes freely off the pen.

IV.—A preserver of the eyes to those who have much to write at night because there is not the glare their eyesight, for a read they have with ten.

For the reasons mentioned, I hope that my private friends will entertain and against those who are not so will it, and trade, and I pledge myself to the same which will be found to the public at large in the country, as exciting Ink Industry.

"All fatal anarchy, all vast and undreamed disrupture."—Cicero.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1863.

THE FRENCH MAILS.

The Saintonge came in yesterday morning with dates from Europe up to the 1st March. The Brazilian question was debated in the English Parliament, and all the London and provincial papers loudly condemned Mr Christie: the "Times" is silent on the matter. The continental journals unanimously censure the Government for seeking to support their envoy, and the Monitem states that Lord Derby and the Tories will demand a vote of censure on the Cabinet. The mercantile public is also very indignant, as their interests are compromised at Rio Janeiro. The Nord asserts that Napoleon has sent instructions to the French Legation in Brazil with decided sympathy for that Government, the English ambassador for foreign affairs has published a despatch accepting on the part of Government, the arbitration proposed, of the King of Belgium. H. B. M's ministry insist they are right, but wish to cut short a tedious question and foster friendly relations with Brazil. The Government was occupied in reducing the expenses and placing the navy on a peace footing.

Lord Palmerston demands of the Czar an amnesty and constitution for Poland. The Parliament, at his request, also voted a life pension of £40,000 for the Prince of Wales, and of £10,000 for his consort. The Prince has property worth £60,000 per annum, in Cornwall. It was said he be married at Windsor on March 10th. Bank of England has reduced interest to 4 per cent, gold being very abundant. Sir Henry Lushington is father of our late admiral in the Plate, died on January 24th. Prince Alfred gave a grand ball at Naples.

The French Chamber of Deputies had closed the debate in reply to the Emperor's message. The French minister at Berlin is said to have "protested against a secret convention between Prussia and the Czar. Victor Hugo has issued an enthusiastic appeal to the Russian army, calling on them to join with the Poles in overturning the tyranny of St. Petersburg; the document seems to have found circulation among the Cossacks.

The Polish rebellion continues. All the European papers are full of the atrocities and bloodshed perpetrated by the Russian troops; burning, devastating, plundering, murdering old men and women and children in cold blood! Subscriptions are now everywhere being raised for the surviving victims of Imperial barbarity.

No pitched battle took place, but the patriots harassed the invaders on every occasion. Langiewicz with 4000 peasants captured Rakow, while the Cossacks had swept the whole country around Riechow. Colonel Kolf of the Imperial guard having received orders to raze the town of Ogrodzieniec, promulgated sanction, leaving a letter in which he stated that he could not obey so barbarous a mandate. The insurgent chief Korowski also threw out his brains. The secret treaty between Prussia and Russia is concluded, and 60,000 Prussian soldiers are concentrated on the Polish frontier, while the Cossacks pass freely through Prussian Poland, under the protection of the authorities. The Prusso-Sclavonic league caused jealousy in Austria, and even in England. The Chambers still manifest aversion to King William.

Denmark is again in hot water about Slesvig-Holstein. The latter duchy insists on union with Slesvig, and the diligent managers of this purport to the Diet, which would not receive it.

The Italian question is as utter insoluble as ever. Naples is still in volcano, though the Sardinian troops admit having shot 7000 "brigands." A large loan is about to be contracted, and a new treaty concluded with Great Britain. The Pope has despatched Monsignor Languigni as Nuncio to Brazil. Garibaldi is getting better. There is some anxiety entertained in Venice, the garrison is strengthened and arrests are frequent.

In Greece they cannot get a King. Canaris is resigned the dictatorship, and was succeeded by Bulgaris and Rophos, who were deposed by the people, and the command rests with the Nat. Assembly.

A Bank is about to be started in Constantinople, capital 2 1/2 millions sterling. His viceroy of Egypt was daily expected to pay fealty to the Sultan.

Marshal O'Donnell has fallen from power the Queen refused to dissolve the Cortes, and sent for Narvaez. The Marquis of Beuno was however ultimately entrusted to form a Cabinet. The railway from Cartagena to Murcia, and Madrid to Sarragossa have been opened.

Letters from Rome state that the Carnival has been paralyzed by the manifesto of the National Committee. There were hardly any evening fêtes—days past to be seen on the Corso. The populace made an effort to assemble on the 14th on Monte Pincio, whereupon the Papal gendarmerie, the crowd was dispersed.

Demonstrations in favour of Poland are still made at the Sorbonne and other places in the Quartier Latin. The pupils of the Polish School have just issued an address to the jeunesse Française." Many of the former now volunteering to join the ranks of the insurgents, although more frequently the sons of French women than of Poland.

INSURRECTION IN POLAND.

Private letters received in Berlin from St. Petersburg, of the 14th, announces that a new division composed of 10,000 men will be sent to Poland, after being reviewed by the Emperor, who addressed a speech to them. Warsaw letters of the 15th say that the movement expected on that day did not take place. All the garrison was under arms. A few groups assembled, but dispersed at the insurrection put off till the 18th. A report is current that a thousand young men of the town have sworn to co-operate in the movement. The Lodzaya asserts that the Marquis Wielopolski never goes out now except in a carriage lined with iron plates, and surrounded by gendarmes, so fearful is he of an attack on his person. It is thought however, that the marquis may exercise the power in order to allay the suspicion which has arisen against him at Court. Mistrust has also seized all minds in the Russian army in Poland. Letters from Cracow say that the Russian columns left Riechow on the 15th to attack Ojcow, but before their arrival the Polish detachment had left Kalesz, and on the 15th attacked Miechow. The first attack was unsuccessful, but the commandant was condemned to death for not reinforcing and firing a second. Langiewicz, after another success obtained over the Russians has entered Staszow The insurrection is extending in the Palatinate of Kalesz and Augustowo. The insurgents, probably driven by the Russians, entered on Austrian territory near Cracow. The Russians are advancing against Ojcow, where Kurowski is posted with the students of the University of Cracow. The Russian movements driver beyond the frontier, but re-armed by the Prussians, are also advancing in another direction, and Langiewicz is surrounded. The following are the most recent news of the corps of Langiewicz:—Being attacked at Chrobrow by the Russian troops from Kielce, he drove them back in disorder, killing 160 men. Since then the Russians have returned with reinforcements, and Langiewicz, to avoid a battle, has retired into the forests. The Russians are marching upon Staszow. The insurgents took 27 cannon at Kielce and Hrobiesrow on the 14th. The movement is spreading in Lithuania. The first national military bulletin at Warsaw has appeared.

The Austrian journals still continue to manifest unequivocal sympathies in favour of the Poles, and will do so so far as to express regret at the part which Austria took formerly in the partition of that country. The Austrian Government confines himself to measures of precaution, both to hinder the Poles of Gallicia from entering the Russian Empire, and to prevent incursions of Polish insurgents or of Russian troops into Gallicia.

"The population in Austria," says a Vienna letter, "remain calm in expectance of the events of Warsaw. The nobles of the Kingdom of Poland, who have always the same sentiment sympathies as those of Gallicia, have advised these latter to do nothing which could compromise the exercise of the liberties of which the Austrian Constitution has put them in possession. This exhaine, notwithstanding the absence of any manifestation in Gallicia, but also the hesitating action of the Assembly of Provincial States at Lemberg."

BRAZIL.

Rio Grande del Norte is ravaged by yellow-fever, and cholera is equally prevalent at Garanhuns and San Bento The provinces send in assurances of support in case of war with England

The Emperor visits daily the barracks, arsenals and magazines. Monsignor Falcinelli, apostolic nuncio, has been removed from Rio to Vienna. The Astrée was expected in that port with the new French Admiral on board, the Oneida entered the Tagus March 1st. The Parana was sighted between Pernambuco and Bahia on the 16th inst.

UNITED STATES.

The dates from the States are to the 11th February. The Southern or Confederate squadron had left Charleston, and attacked the blockading squadron; after a few hours' fighting the Federal vessels dispersed. But the Northern, having reinforced, blockaded the port again, with nearly 140 vessels, all iron-cased. The Federal squadron has received positive orders from Washington to bombard Charleston without delay. The Federal army on the Potomac remained inactive, and in the same place as before.

In Tennessee 3 or 4000 Confederates attacked Fort Donnelson, but were repulsed with great slaughter. The Confederates, however, soonbend ed in taking Woodbury, in that State.

From Vicksburg nothing has transpired.

In New Jersey, and several of the Western State, resolutions have been proposed for peace. It is the general impression that the democratic members of Congress are in the majority, and that this lamentable war will be brought to a close.

In Washington, the Emperor of the Fre ch's plan of mediation has been well received. The New York Times supports the measure strongly, and the Journal. of Commerce demands that Gallia be at once accepted, and the delegates be dispatched either to Montreal or Mexico, to treat.

We hail with the most unspeakable satisfaction the prospect of peace in the States. If the North has learned a lesson, the South also has been taught the immense resources of its enlightened adversary. The universal feeling throughout the whole country is in favor of peace. When such is the will of the almighty majority, the beginning of the end is arrived.

MEXICO.

The news from Mexico is to the 23th ultimo. Puebla had been surprised and routed General Dublado, but it appears altogether false, the report that the Mexicans had beaten back the French under Forey.

General Forey was still in Orizaba, and the Mexicans were hanging all those prisoners who had afforded any assistance to the French.

The harbour of Vera Cruz was full of French transports, laden with reinforcements and supplies recently arrived from France.

LIVERPOOL WOOL MARKET.

February 22nd 1863.

The Wool sales which commenced here on the 20th Jan, terminated on Wednesday. Of the 55,355 bales offered, 45,000 were sold, at about a decline on the last public sales (October, November) of 10 per cent. This is not surprising when it is borne in mind that the Confederate substances were in active demand, that the wool market was much excited, and cotton considerably above the price at which these sales were held. Nearly 8000 bales River Plate wool were entered at auction from the 10th to the 13th instant, and a considerable quantity withdrawn. The general result of wool was very inferior. Competition irregular and weak, falling off towards the close. Privately 1/2 per cent lower than the sales held there in October last.

ANTWERP WOOL MARKET.

Feb. 21st 1863.

The public sales of the 13th inst, attrated a crowd of buyers, and was rather animated. Of 7400 bales Buenos Ayres and Montevideo 5697 were sold nearly all of the clip of 1861 and 1862. The wools of 1861 are generally in excess full of from 5 to 10 centesimus. About 100 bales of Buenos Ayres new wool sold at advanced rates.

Cash sales are established in the states, we do not look forward to any improvement in the market. The stock on hand is 2500 bales bides were in very slight demand.

PARISIAN HOURS.

The following letter from our literary Consul General to Marmol is so good that we have been requested to circulate it by the subscription "associations" of Walter Savage Landor are trite, whereas this document is striking by original. Whether the distinguished author and traveller Parnos wished to quiz the gentleman who mistook Rome for Jerusalem, and Cork for Constantinople, we cannot say, but any one who fancies Lamartine was not joking Varela we invoke the expression "credat Judæus," which signifies "I don't believe that to the marines." We applaud Hector's prudence in not directing the following to his maternal relations.

Dear Marmol.

A thousand thanks for your kindness in assuring me that I am a first-rate historian, especially touching Greece. I have a fixed idea, to study the mechanism of European politics, as my country one day derive great profit from my experience; and in order that I shall feel happy to have spent some time in these centres of European corruption and infamy. I attend lectures given by the most eminent French savants, and do my best to rub up against all the big wigs of science, art, press and forum. I am already two days acquainted with Lamartine and Girardin, two very nice fellows, only the former sends round the hat for his journal, and the latter sold his soul for promotion. I almost regret that I visited Lamartine; he is so shabby, and fond of money. I know very well-to-do people who would be not bad, but the ex-President of the Republic should be above such petty notions. I have no money, I should wish very much to make his acquaintance, and he replied that he had no objection to see what I was like. Just fancy my Sovereign of the Argentine Republic, and received me in his shirt sleeves "I beg a thousand pardons, sir, for this liberty, but I hope you will excuse my curiosity to see so great a man."

—Thank you, he replied, and I beg you will excuse me for not shaving this morning. Won't you sit down."

—Thank you, Sir.

—Are you from the Colonies?

—The Colonies I oh, no, I come from the Argentine republic.

—Where's that, to whom does it belong.

—To nobody, sir; we are free and independent states, since 1810. Buenos Ayres formerly belonged to Spain.

—Ah, just so, but I thought it was now in Brazil.

—Not at all, sir.

—And are you at last quiet, down there?

—Yes, for the present, because we have shipped Rosas and got a very decent gentleman instead.

—And do you tell me that the monster Rosas lived in Buenos Aires?

—Yes, sir.

—By the by, I know all about him from Pachero and Varela, did you see this fine gentleman's acquaintance.

—To be sure, sir, we were as thick as school-fellows.

—He was a fine fellow; is he alive still?

—No sir, he died in B. Ayres although he was born in Montevideo.

—Yes, I know, I was along in your country much like here?

This last question bothered me, and it was ashamed to confess my ignorance of geography; but I didn't like to tell him so, and replied:

—I am sorry to find, sir, that you Europeans believe us so down in estimation, like barbarians, and have neither literature nor clever men.

—Oh, I didn't quite say that.

—Well, I'm a point of civil zation, refinement, and cultivation we lick the old world hollow. Buenos Aires has 100,000 souls.

—Very fine.

—And splendiferous constructions, with a theatre bigger than any in Paris.

—You're not serious!

—And finer streets and brighter gas than yours. And private houses—I can assure you that would make Europe jealous. And four railways, that is, two already made, and the rest we intend to make, some fine day or other.

—I'm my conscience, I never heard the like, and perhaps you have some lawyers there!

—Oh yes, 20,000.

—And is the capital called Buenos Ayres?

—Yes sir, and we have the most free and enlightened constitution on the face of the Globe, not excepting the U. S.

—Freedom of worship?

—Of course sir.

—And have you any serious paper, how many book-sellers, and do you possess that class of literature called "Bulletins"? (This was a cut at his friend Rigodon of the mutual admiration society).

—I tell you, sir, if the progress of a country consist in the size of its journals, we are far ahead of Paris.

—The devil you are!

—Here you are, sir, look at the "Tribuna," and it contains none of your verses vulgarized by Mancilla.

He turned it upside down, and felt ashamed of himself (!), then with the blandest smile imaginable said.

—Do me the favor to leave me this magnificent paper.

With pleasure sir, but don't go believe that it's the only one.

We have three others just as big, and an English paper and a French one.

—Well now, you are just in the way to go ahead, but don't let your hearts get rotten. I shall hardly see young America any better than at present, but you are a tight young fellow and will see queer changes, if you keep your eye open, in the highway of intellectual progress.

Here Lamartine held down his head and looked gloomy.

I didn't feel comfortable myself, though gazing on the hero of revolution and liberty. Presently he began to talk in no mean word shabby a manner that it is unfit for publication. I pulled out my pocket-companion and asked him to sign his name on a blank sheet of the Album; but he obstinately refused, alleging he had a pain in his side.

—Leave it with me, and I will add two words to the many pretty things it contains.

—I can't do that sir, to-morrow I am going on to Girardin and ask him for a line; then I'll trouble you again.

So saying, I left. Girardin is a middle-aged man, living in a genteel house; but he seems very sad, no doubt for killing his friend Carrel in a duel. twenty years ago. Although a decided flying writer, he cares and swears at journalism. I produced my inseparable Album, and begged him to put down his name for something, no matter what. He did write two lines, but I won't say what they were. The fact is he has just got married to a low woman of some sort, and his friends don't visit him. I have introduced myself, in the same manner to Jules Favre, Ducrault and Augier, and I am getting young after the manner of all of the great men, because once I get a word from them, I can edge myself into second-rate society, without much pains.

Such is the way I mind my office at business in modern Athens, galavanting and humbugging, sometimes squeezing my pumps, and the Secretaryship which is quite a disgrace beside ours in the calle ateneo. They are very ill paid indeed, never listening to any but the first-class spouters: but then the stupid members speak, like a great many, for the sake of being published in the papers. There is nothing of interest in the debates, and I think you have now had almost enough from your friend and admirer.

The argentine Consul general at the Imperial Court.

ELECTIONS.

Those of Sunday gave the following result; it is confidently asserted that the Club Buenos Ayres has had a surplus of over 3,000 - ready made votes which it was not necessary to present, the hand writing was said to be well known, and to belong to a conspicuous character, and an important disclosure is expected.

There are every moment new and interesting particulars connected with the elections. The parish of S. Sorro gave 600 votes for the yellow list, but there only appears a sum-total of 1300 altogether; that is to say 400 more in the rest of the town, yet the friends of the yellow list were sufficiently numerous to prevent elections at Montserrat and San Nicolas, to win by twenty to one at Colegio, Piedad and San Miguel, to oblige the appearance of the white list in Merced and San Telmo, to fly to the roofs of the neighbouring houses.

REFORM WANTED

There may be subjects upon which we, all differ: there may be even doubts as to the wording of the constitution, or the construction of the article: but there is one topic upon which we all agree, and that is that we have too many Governments in the Argentine Republic A country so confusedly divided, disordered, and misgoverned as this Republic, there is not on the face of the globe. It is high time, now that the sheaves of war have again sounded the peaceable fellow citizens have been butchered in broad day light, that soldiers and generals, ammunition and gold ounces, are hurried off to the interior, to maintain the supremacy, if not of the law, at least of the majority that has elected the public servants. Aside the fact, that the argentine house is split up by the clashing interest of its multifarious rulers, that all the paper dollers in the bank, all the cabinets in the Parque, all the heroes of Pavon, will not keep the country together, if some stringent measures be not at once taken by the National executive.

We disclaim all wish to wound the feelings of our absent fellow citizens, but, when after all the retrenchments of peace, we learn that a handful of men have in a few hours succeeded in plundering some of the most populous districts, within almost a stone throw of half a dozen of-grave prime ministers, and officials, we cannot altogether forego the conviction that there is some base treachery at the bottom of it all.

Weakened by these eternal revolts, not with a foreign enemy, but with ourselves, the Argentine republic suffers more from the free-and-easy institutions than it could from despotism. What do the citizens of San Luis, Mendoza, even those of the republican governors, and the ingenious and other nobility? Are not men shown, no matter colour of the law, by the strong hand to the most powerful on the globe are punishable only with a short period of imprisonment? Is not every branch of industry, trade, and commerce, at the mercy of the support governors, deputies, prime ministers, and a whole host of officials. It is a fact, the Argentine is the most misgoverned, but best fairly played out, and ever or later be abolished.

If Rioja, San Juan, and many other provinces have their governors, deputy governors, ministers, not declare the Villa Lugano and Arceo so many distinct republics, and demand that their votes be given? Are they less deserving of dignity? Are not their appointments the country, more important than those of the Argentine? Are they less enlightened — consequently less fitted to enjoy these trouble and expensive dignities, than almost unlettered gauchos?

It is idle to talk of railroads, cotton fields, of immigrations, as the frequency and number of the latter depends upon the former. Not every attempt at rural industry ever effort of the National government, and frighten terrify immigrants amongst us.

We have it from the most trustworthy sources, that the misery of destitution in the province is little of exaggeration. The officials, and in many parts even the priests, are for months without pay. The people are without the known and common goods. The cultivation: the only astonishing is that, with such poverty, such misery, such total neglect, such disorder and order have been so long endured.
